First Edition, Second Impression; pp. xiv, 370(last blank); numerous illustrations, notes, bibliography, index; original papered boards; a fine copy in dustwrapper. New York; Bantam Books; (2008). \**A chronicle of an experiment designed to transform the way humans think about animals and humans, this book profiles a young chimpanzee, brought up with a large human family and taught to use sign language proficiently, until the funding for the study ended and he spent the next two decades exiled from his “family” and shuttled in and out of various facilities, including a medical lab. Could a chimpanzee raised from infancy by a human family bridge the gap between species--and change the way we think about the boundaries between animal and human? Here is the strange and moving account of an experiment intended to answer these questions, and of the chimp who was chosen to see it through. Columbia University psychologist Herbert S. Terrace’s goal was to teach a chimpanzee American Sign Language in order to refute Noam Chomsky’s assertion that language is an exclusively human trait. Nim Chimpsky, the baby chimp, was “adopted” by a graduate student. At first his progress exceeded all expectations--his charm and mischievous sense of humour endeared him to everyone. But no one had thought through the long-term consequences of raising a chimp in the human world. Nim’s story will move and entertain at the same time that it challenges us to ask what it means to be human. --From publisher description.* #59816 A$45.00

Cr. 8vo, First Edition; pp. [ii], xii, 258(last 5 blank); a few illustrations, notes, references, index; original cloth; a fine copy in dustwrapper. Princeton, New Jersey; Princeton University Press; (1999). \**Based on new insights into the behavior of chimps and other great apes, our now extinct human ancestors, and existing hunting and gathering societies, Stanford shows the remarkable role that meat has played. Stanford argues that “the origins of human intelligence are linked to the acquisition of meat, especially through the cognitive capacities necessary for the strategic sharing of meat with fellow group members”. He cites the role hunting plays for chimpanzees where meat is traded for sexual favors and to cement alliances.*

NOTICE TO CUSTOMERS:

This is our three hundred and thirty-fourth short list. We hope you find something of interest.

We intend to produce many more lists in future on a variety of subjects and we would prefer where possible to send these by email as PDF file attachments or links to files on our Website. This has the obvious advantage of reducing costs and enhancing the speed of delivery and the email/PDF versions will also be enhanced with colour illustrations. A fully illustrated version of this list in pdf format is also available on our website or will be emailed on request. Likewise we encourage you to send orders by email, fax or telephone.

If you would like to receive future lists please indicate your interests by email (preferred) or by using the form below by post. Please note we no longer have fax facilities. If you would like to receive ALL lists (email only) please let us know also. If for any reason you do not wish to receive any more of these lists, also please let us know and we will cease and desist. We have experimented with a number of forms for emailing orders to us but many security systems now prevent such links from working correctly so we suggest simply emailing us at: books@GastonRenard.com and copying and pasting the entries of the items you want from the list above. If you encounter any difficulties, please let us know! For orders by post please use the Order Form at end, we do however recommend email as cheaper, faster and more efficient.
